Whilst the World Cup may mean a month in front of the TV for footy fans – it also brings a string of fantastic reductions in the prices of top West End shows with Discounttheatre.com.

Theatre lovers can now take advantage of these special offers as the online theatre ticket specialist has worked with 30 top West End shows to slash rates for the World Cup month: from June 11 to July 11 2010.

Said Discounttheatre.com deputy chairman Ashley Herman: "Visitors are now flocking into London from all over the world so it's fantastic that all these top shows have got together to provide a top value alternative to the football. World Cup month is now a great time take advantage of these super-low ticket prices".

The reductions apply to the West End's top musicals and plays, such as Priscilla Queen of the Desert (down from £25 to £15.25), All the Fun of the Fair (down from £55 to £23.99), Dirty Dancing (down from £62.50 to £39.99), Legally Blonde (down from £60 to £45.99) or 39 Steps (down from £22.50 to £10.99).

All tickets should be booked through www.discounttheatre.com, whose parent company, Encore Tickets is one of the top three ticket agents in the UK, a fully bonded ticket agent and member of the Society of Ticket Agents and Retailers.

England fan Steven Wynter (third left) got something of a surprise when he was asked to play in goal for The Gumbies from 'Priscilla Queen of the Desert' when they decided to have their own World Cup outside the theatre in London's Cambridge Circus to celebrate prices being slashed at 30 London theatres during World Cup month. Well, he probably did as well as England's Robert Green....
